

Capital Gives Sad Farewell To Roosevelt; Rites Today

By HOWARD FLIEGER
Washington, April 14 (AP)—War-time Washington, steeped in sorrow, offered a last sad farewell today to Franklin Delano Roosevelt—its first citizen for a dozen dramatic years. It was a capital clad in mourning—a hushed, somber contrast to the carnival atmosphere of other Roosevelt homecomings—which awaited the ten-car special train bringing Mr. Roosevelt's body here from Warm Springs, Ga., where he died Thursday.

The bustle of government was stilled for the day, closed by a proclamation of President Harry S. Truman calling the nation to prayer.

Tribute in Work
Arrival of the funeral train signalled the start of a month's memorial in the armed services. But War Production Chairman J. A. Krug asked no interruption in war industry.

"American workers and management can pay their tribute to Franklin D. Roosevelt in no better way than by staying on the job to maintain an unbroken production of war goods," he said.

President Truman—thrust with bewildering suddenness from relative obscurity into a position of world pre-eminence—headed the official delegation meeting the Roosevelt train at Washington's union station at 10 a. m. Eastern War Time.

He will accompany the body of his predecessor to Hyde Park, N. Y., for burial tomorrow.

Route Roped Off
Hours in advance of the funeral procession police strung guard ropes along the route from the station to the White House.

Representatives of Congress, the judiciary and the cabinet arranged to meet the body and accompany Mr. Roosevelt on his last trip down historic Pennsylvania avenue to the White House.

Two non-commissioned officers each from the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps, commanded by Army Master Sergeant James Bowder, were designated pallbearers here. Units of all the armed forces, including Wacs, Waves and Women Marines, were assigned places in the funeral procession to accompany the caisson-borne casket.

Funeral rites impressive in their simplicity were arranged for 4 p. m. (EWT) in the gold-appointed east room at the White House. It was there just 12 weeks ago today that Mr. Roosevelt, with bowed head, attended divine services on the inaugural day which started him on his fourth term as President.

Going to Hyde Park
The Episcopal order for the burial of the dead was the funeral service for the White House ceremony, attended only by the family and those associates and friends who could be accommodated in the east room.

A few hours after the White House services the funeral party will entrain for Hyde Park. There private burial services will be held at 10 a. m. (EWT) Sunday in a hedged flower garden on the Roosevelt estate—a spot predestined to become a national shrine.

The final resting place lies near the Roosevelt mansion, overlooking the placid Hudson river which Mr. Roosevelt loved.

The usual pomp and ceremony of high-official funerals was reserved almost entirely to the processions which accompanied the dead President from one place to another. The actual funeral ceremonies were patterned in the simplicity which Mr. Roosevelt had fixed as his own way of life in war-time.

Tokyo Arsenal Area Blasted

Guam, April 14 (AP)—The greatest B-29 raiding force yet struck the arsenal of Tokyo early today with fire bombs, causing explosions which pilots said were heard more than 100 miles away.

Explosive blasts bounced the 60-ton Superfortresses as much as one mile upwards through the air, pilots said. They and crewmen unanimously agreed it was "a very successful raid."

The Japanese met the raiders with jet-propelled fighters which B-29 crewmen said flashed across the sky like great balls of fire.

There was no official report yet on Superfortress losses, but one returning crewman said losses were light despite the jet-propelled interceptors. Tail Gunner Sgt. Remo Lodi, North Plymouth, Mass., said pilots of the jet planes apparently were not able to locate the Superfortresses.

A Japanese Imperial communiqué claimed 41 raiding planes were shot down and 80 damaged after "wantonly" bombing the city.

Enemy headquarters asserted the Meiji shrine, one of Japan's major Shinto shrines was destroyed, and fires started in the Imperial palace and the detached Akasaka palace.

GUARD STATUS IS OFFERED TO MINUTEMEN; 25 MEN ARE NEEDED

Adams county can have the first mechanized troop in the Pennsylvania State Guard—if the present Co. A-1 of the Minutemen of the county can enlist 77 men.

That decision was announced Friday night by Maj. Harry G. Banzoff, Harrisburg, a commander of the First Cavalry Squadron of the guard, after an inspection of the county Minutemen at the state armory on West Confederate avenue.

The announcement came after the present company—to a man—stepped forward to enlist "for the duration" in the State Guard. The two-year-old company of Minutemen is now a reserve unit and will continue with that status until the 77 men are enlisted.

52 Sign Up

At the conclusion of the drill 52 Minutemen signed applications for admission to the State Guard and it was announced that doctors will be on hand at the regular drill next Thursday when it is hoped the full troop can be recruited. Several new men were recruited for the Minutemen Friday and also signed guard applications.

Major Banzoff and fellow officers who accompanied him here for an inspection of the county company were "very well pleased" with the local officers and men and declared the armory offers "completely adequate facilities" for a motorized unit in this county.

Will Become Troop C

When the unit here reaches the required strength of 77 men and three officers it will become Troop C of the First Cavalry Squadron and will be issued uniforms and equipment by the federal government. Its mechanized equipment will include one command car, eight armored cars, two 1½-ton trucks and four motorcycles, Major Banzoff told the unit.

Major Banzoff and Capt. C. Arthur Brame, company commander, addressed the men in the armory after the visitors had witnessed an outdoor drill, retreat ceremony, demonstration drills in the armory and conducted an inspection of the company.

After the company had volunteered in a body to enlist in the guard, Judge W. C. Sheely, who was among the guests for the evening, told the company he, personally, and the county in general are "very proud" of the unit and congratulated them on the decision they had just made.

Considered Several Units

In his address to the men Major Banzoff spoke of the services to be performed by "civilian soldiers" who are trained to serve in any emergency. He traced the history of the cavalry squadron to which the county unit will be attached. He said an armored car troop, which will be the only unit of its kind in the state, is needed to complete the organization of the troop. Several reserve units were under consideration for the assignment, he said.

The county units must enroll 77 men and be kept at full strength, he said. Part of the guard program is a 10-day summer camp from June 24 to July 3 to supplement the two hours per week of training throughout the year.

He explained the guard was formed by an act of the Legislature providing the State Guard should take the place of the National Guard until that organization returns from active military duty whereupon the State Guard will be dissolved. The present guard organization includes infantry, cavalry, engineer and quartermaster and maintenance units with Maj. Gen. Milton C. Baker.

Here And There
News Collected At Random

In the memory of the great was placed the name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, 31st President of the United States, at 4:35 o'clock Thursday afternoon, April 12, 1945. In the peaceful quiet of his Warm Springs, Ga. retreat, where for 20 years he found physical relief from his paralytic affliction, he slept into eternity two hours after he was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage.

This afternoon in the East Room of the White House, where the great of many nations were received, funeral services will be held and on Sunday morning his mortal remains will be buried on the ancestral estate at Hyde Park, N. Y.

A one time member of the New York legislature, assistant Secretary of the Navy, Democratic candidate for Vice President and Governor of New York were stepping stones to his elevation to the exalted position of President of the United States.

Destiny and his political handicraft won for him election to the highest office in the land four times. . . . an accomplishment never before achieved by man in this great nation.

The world's most catastrophic war earned him wide acclaim and fame. As a member of the Big Three and Commander-in-chief of one of the three most powerful military forces in the world, he was the spearhead for the smaller Allied Nations in their struggle for world recognition and position in the peace that must eventually come. . . . and soon.

To his family, his physicians and his close intimate friends his ill-health must have been apparent and its seriousness more concerning than announced. But to the nation and world at large his death was an electrifying shock. . . . bringing deep and widespread mourning. The cares and strain of office during 12 years and 40 days weighed heavily upon him. The peace that he was struggling for and which appears so imminent he will not know in mortal life. The reward of his labors he will have to find in the eternal life.

Flags are flying at half-staff throughout most of the civilized world today. . . . a tribute to his memory, to the exalted office he filled and out of respect to the esteem and admiration he was held in by countless millions.

He has earned an enviable position and niche in the pages of history and the Democratic party has lost its most enterprising and energetic leader. He will be long remembered.

LOCAL CAPTAIN, WAR PRISONER, IS AT MUHLBERG

Captain John C. Hollinger, former assistant professor of military science and tactics at Gettysburg college, who was reported "missing in action" last December 16 and later reported a prisoner of war in Germany, is at Stalag IV, at Muhlberg, about 35 miles north of Dresden, Germany, on the Elbe river.

American forces are reported near Leipzig, about 30 miles west of Muhlberg.

Captain Hollinger wrote his wife from the German prison camp on January 2. His letter follows:

"I suppose you have already heard from the War Department as to my present status. Well, I am a prisoner of war and am O.K. Have undergone some extreme exposure prior to arriving at this prisoner of war camp Christmas eve and Xmas day I shall never forget. Cannot relate all to you now as I am limited as to what all I can say."

What Have You They Can Wear?

Designating next week as "Clean-Out-Your-Clothes-Closet Week" in Gettysburg and Adams county, the local committee for the collection of clothing for the use of civilian war victims in liberated areas abroad has selected as its slogan for the drive here: "What do you have that they can wear?"

The former Peoples' Cash store room at the corner of Baltimore and West Middle streets will be open next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to receive donations of used clothing from Gettysburg and all sections of the county.

The center will be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. on Wednesday and Thursday and from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. on the final day. Local school children are being asked to take bundles of used clothing to their school buildings on the three collection days.

Arrangements will be made by the local committee, headed by Supt. L. (Please Turn to Page 5)

START ISSUING CANNING SUGAR HERE MONDAY

The War Price and Rationing boards in this 10-county district will begin issuing sugar for canning fruits and making jellies April 16, Walter C. Young, director of OPA's Harrisburg district office, announced today.

This year housewives will get all of their home canning sugar by applying to their local boards. No ration stamps will be made good for canning sugar. The board will determine the amount of sugar needed, based on information furnished by the housewife.

The total amount of canning sugar allowed for each person will not be more than 20 pounds this year. Not more than 100 pounds a family can be allowed even if there are more than eight persons in it.

Basis for Rations
For canning fruits or fruit juices, the allowance will be on the basis of one pound of sugar for each quart to be canned. Within the 20 pound maximum allowance, five pounds of sugar for each person will be allowed for canning vegetables and for making jams, jellies, relishes, catsup, etc.

For people who produce home canned foods for sale, no more sugar than was used for this purpose during 1944 will be allowed this year. "Sugar supplies," Mr. Young pointed out, "are feeling the pinch of a long war. Stocks for this time of year are the lowest since the war began. Military needs are high. Ships that otherwise might be bringing sugar into this country are hauling supplies to the battlefronts. Manpower and machinery for the (Please Turn to Page 2)

Allies Operating In Rear Of East Front Nazis; Bypass Leipzig

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
(Associated Press War Editor)

Gen. Omar N. Bradley's Americans, already operating in the rear area of Nazis fighting the Russians, have bypassed Leipzig and virtually cut the Reich in two with a swift 32-mile dash carrying 25 miles past the northwest tip of Czechoslovakia.

All direct communication between Berlin and the south was cut. The Ninth Army on the Elbe 45 miles from the capital met heavy fire from German flak batteries.

Behind the fronts the First and Ninth Armies virtually wiped out the last of the Ruhr pocket, where 150,000 Nazis had been trapped. More than 100,000 Germans had surrendered in the pocket.

The dash skirting the Czechoslovak frontier was made by U. S. Third Army spearheads. Three of Bradley's armies now were less than 100 miles from the Russians. The Third was 88 miles away, the Ninth 90 miles, and the First was fighting for Leipzig and last reported 95 miles from the Red Armies.

New Red Drives

Red Army troops, released by the fall of Vienna, mounted new drives toward Prague and the Nazi mountain redoubt in southern Germany. Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian Army was driving hard toward Berchtesgaden, Hitler's lair, and his tanks were rolling the Germans westward across Austria. Berlin indicated a wholesale withdrawal of Nazi troops on the sweeping 170-mile front.

At the same time the Second Ukrainian Army of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky pushed into Moravia, last German Army arsenal, capturing Goeding (Hodonin), a war center 32 miles from Brunn, Czechoslovak munitions city, and storming the Morava river on a 14-mile stretch.

British troops on the eastern Italian front drove into the outskirts of Imola, Po valley highway center less than 20 miles east of Bologna, advancing against light resistance. Scattered opposition met the Americans moving north on the west coast toward La Spezia.

Lashed by Allied Air Power
But there was heavy fighting in the Salerno river bridgehead, which the British widened steadily. RAF bombers aided this drive, attacking communications during the night, and U. S. planes gave daylight battlefront support.

A force of 1,150 U. S. heavy bombers and fighters lashed at the German pocket in western France on both sides of the Gironde river north of Bordeaux, after a night in which Kiel, chief haven for what is left of the German navy, was struck by 750 RAF heavies.

A dispatch from supreme headquarters said the Germans in the Reich no longer had cohesive front or coherent command. The linkup of the western Allies with the Russians was near, the dispatch said, but there might be military fighting into next winter, after the active phase of the European war ends by proclamation of V-E Day. This probably must wait until Marshal Stalin and the western Allies agree upon the date. Long fighting against the redoubt in the south and even against north German pockets was predicted.

American Advances
American armies gained 30 miles or more in a day. Brunswick, historic Jena where Napoleon defeated the Prussians; Assen, a Dutch bastion, all fell. Magdeburg was under siege, as was Arnheim in Holland. Bayreuth's outskirts in the redoubt area were entered by U. S. Third Army tanks.

The British in the north advanced to within 49 miles of Hamburg, outflanking that great German port on the north. The U. S. Ninth had flanked it already on the south, bypassing the Danish peninsula and the port of Luebeck. Bremen was under British siege.

The Ninth's Elbe bridgehead near Magdeburg was firm and was deepening slowly on the Brandenburg plain. Other tanks to the north were "so close to the Russian front," a dispatch said, that the Germans could interchange tank divisions over night.

RUSSIA TO BE REAL TEST FOR TRUMAN POLICY

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR. (Substituting by Dewitt MacKenzie)

President Truman and Secretary Stettinius have proclaimed "no change" in American foreign policy. There is one place where they may have a hard time making the proclamation stick.

Of all his personal diplomacy, President Roosevelt's policy regarding Russia probably depended more directly on him than any other.

Labels are likely to prove inaccurate. It may not be strictly correct to term the Roosevelt Russian policy as "co-operation at any cost," but it was very close to that and also was probably the foreign policy which drew more criticism than any other. Entirely aside from those who always want to "get tough" when anyone fails to abide strictly by what Americans consider their country's ideals, there has been a more temperate expression of fear that by yielding to Russia on certain points affecting small nations, we have been storing up a whirlwind.

Present Situation This "no compromise on virtue" attitude probably has been held in check, to a great extent, by widespread knowledge that Roosevelt was far better informed on the subject than anyone else, that his motives were unquestionable, and that there was no course except to trust him.

Roosevelt obviously thought that the maintenance of machinery for co-operation between the Big Three was more important than anything else. He not only seemed to feel that in yielding now he could hope for enlightened changes later, but he also acted personally as a moderator between Joseph Stalin and Winston Churchill, the equator between what almost amounts to two poles.

Truman and Stettinius cannot expect, for a time at least, to enjoy the same public confidence regarding foreign affairs as did the Roosevelt-Hull team. Those who disagreed with Roosevelt, but felt incompetent to go to the mat with him and his unique store of information, may now be expected to become more insistent.

"No change" may be a diligently gauged watchword. Whether it can be accomplished is another matter.

START ISSUING

May Be Enough In this situation OPA simply had to tighten up. We cannot afford an over-issuance of home-canning sugar such as occurred last year when, throughout the country, we used 300,000 tons more than the total allotment.

"Nevertheless, if only those people who actually will use sugar for home canning apply for it, there will be enough to preserve as much fruit as was prepared in homes last year.

The local boards will provide a form for each applicant to fill out. Applications must be made before October 31.

The application form includes a few questions about the amount of canning done last year and the amount of canning the housewife plans to do this year. Instructions for figuring the amount of sugar needed for this year's canning are printed on the form.

Other Instructions

The housewife must attach to the application "Spare Stamp 13" from War Ration Book Four for each member of the family covered. The form with the attached stamps may be returned to the board in person or by mail. Since the board will not be able to act immediately upon applications submitted in person, it will save time for both the applicant and the board if applications are mailed.

The amount of sugar issued to each applicant will be the amount actually to be used for home canning. The boards will give each applicant sugar coupons good for buying canning sugar in any store. To meet individual requirements, both five-pound and one-pound coupons will be issued. Before a five-pound home canning coupon is used, it must be signed with the name of the person who applied for the sugar.

People who prepare home canned foods for sale also must fill out an application form and submit it to their local board. These applications will be sent to the district office, which will tell the board how much sugar to issue each applicant. The amount of sugar issued will be based on the information given on the form and will allow each applicant to produce as much canned goods for sale as in 1944.

Leaves From Diary Of War Correspondent

By HAL BOYLE

With the American First Army (AP)—German boys in knee pants, buxom hausfraus, girls and elderly men and women whose place would be at the fireside in normal times have taken the salvation of Germany into their hands.

With millions of German sons and husbands killed or prisoners, and other hundreds of thousands still serving in a lost war, the burden of sustaining the Reich's economic life has fallen on the children, wives and old folks. They are tilling Germany's beautiful rolling green acres, filling in bomb and shell cratered fields and repairing damaged homes to make them at least livable.

Old men and sturdy young women wearing the blue trousers that are the almost national civilian uniform are plowing and planting. Old women and children are raking early hay in the upper pasture land. They wait only for the first wave of battle to pass them by—then they come out of their cellars and start building toward their old lives with incredible industry.

Everybody Works

That's the one thing that impresses you most as you drive through German towns and countryside. These people seem to realize that no one can save them now but themselves and already they are channeling into rebuilding activities the energy they have poured into the war for five and a half years.

Old men of 80 or more totter out to salvage bits of timber for fire or to haul wood from the forests. I saw one group of these old codgers trying to fill a bomb crater in a field near Hamburg. Four of them would scrape a few ounces of earth from the surrounding soil and toss them into the crater with long shovels. For four days on the way to and from the battlefield I saw them working in the morning and still at their task in the evening when I returned. On the evening of the fifth day the crater was filled and they had moved on to the next one.

People take very seriously the possibility of food shortages against which Eisenhower warned. Most cellars are stocked with home-preserved fruits and vegetables and most families have vegetable gardens tended by housewives, boys and girls and the white-haired keen-eyed old women you see everywhere.

Why Did They Start It? Even milk cows have gone to work in Germany. Teamed together or with a horse, they pull plows and carts. Draft horses are scarce on farms apparently because they went to war to pull artillery pieces through Poland, France and Russia. Much German artillery was horse drawn to ease the strain on gasoline reserves.

Germany once was described by a woman writer as "a beautiful prison." It is a shining land with deep, clean rivers, clean rolling hills, and clean forests of ordered beauty bordering fruitful valleys. Driving through these signs of patterned thrift, soldiers find it difficult to explain why Germany ever went to war.

"With a country like this to live in," they ask, "what did they want to start a fight for?" Lots of Germans are asking themselves the same question.

Schlotheim, Germany, April 14—Two American soldiers on the road to Berlin halted long enough to play cupid by arranging a marriage between a French slave laborer and a German girl.

"They stopped us as we were rolling through town and asked us if we would please help them get married," said Sgt. Gerald E. Herrstadt, New York city.

The Frenchman was Jacques Rousseau, 24, of Ligneville, France. He wanted to marry a German girl—she was named Erna Gindler and was 22 years old—because she had brought him food for the last four years while he was compelled to do forced labor.

"It was really a love match—and she was a real good-looking girl, slim and blonde. We told them that we would do what we could for them."

Nazi Changed Attitude

The Frenchman explained that they had tried repeatedly to get married but that the burgomeister had refused to sanction the ceremony because such marriages were frowned upon by the Nazi party.

That was the status of the case when the American Army arrived on the scene.

"Let's go to a priest," said Herrstadt.

The priest agreed to perform the ceremony although the girl was a protestant and married the couple at once.

Afterward, the happy couple took a handsome radio liberated from an overrun Nazi party office, as a wedding gift.

Fortune Tellers Ordered From Town SEEK CHAPLAINS FOR ARMY HERE

Three "gypsies" who were arrested Friday by borough police on a charge of the "unlawful telling of fortunes for gain" were ordered to leave town at a hearing conducted this morning by Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore.

Two of the folks, Mrs. Helen Martin, no fixed address, and Rose Martin, Harrisburg, were held in jail Friday night in default of $500 bail each, while the third, Mrs. Julia Thompson, Philadelphia, was set free on her own recognizance for the hearing this morning because she was caring for a small baby.

The trio came to town earlier in the week and secured a license from Burgess Fred G. Pfeffer for the sale of books. It was later discovered, however, that they also were giving fortune reading which is against the state law. As the system operated, they would sell for $1 a pamphlet priced at about 25 cents and also "give free" a fortune telling.

V-E DAY BEING PUSHED BACK BY WAR'S EVENTS

By JAMES M. LONG

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, April 14 (AP)—The German army, still fighting fiercely in the east, no longer has either a cohesive front nor a coherent command in the west. The long-awaited Allied linkup severing the Reich in the middle is near—but that does not mean that the war in Europe will end at that time.

There might still be military fighting on into next winter, but it was not likely that it would still be regarded as an active phase of the European war.

V-E Day will come, according to the best available opinion here, somewhere between the Allied linkup and the end of subsequent fighting and it will come by Allied proclamation, and not by German surrender.

Nazis Won't Quit

Events since Gen. Eisenhower a fortnight ago predicted that the Germans would continue to fight as best they could until the last inch of the Reich has been overrun have only served to underscore the supreme commander's words.

He declared then that the Nazis would not quit; there would be no formal surrender; that victory would probably be announced by proclamation.

But it is hardly likely that Eisenhower alone could or would proclaim such a V-E Day. It would be proclaimed by a joint agreement with Premier Marshal Stalin, and it could hardly come, whatever the success of the cleanup in the west, until the Eastern front too, had collapsed.

New Fronts Forming

There is no disposition here to believe that even splitting the Reich in two would cause the collapse of a fighting front—actually many fighting fronts as the German command disintegrated into separate pockets of major resistance.

These fronts already are forming. One, perhaps the weakest of, is shaping up in the north in a great arc backed up against the Baltic sea and trying to hold the northern ports and perhaps Berlin.

The other would be a great arc in the south centered upon the "national redoubt" of Nazism—the hideaways of mountainous southern Germany and Northern Austria between Lake Constance and Berchtesgaden.

The arc in the north would probably break into more than one pocket, particularly if the Allies in the west continue their wedge toward Hamburg and Luebeck.

It would mean there would be the Berlin arc to clear out, the northern ports, the flooded fortress of Western Holland—perhaps even Denmark and Norway. The farthestmost and best naturally guarded of these three—Norway—and the heart of the southern German redoubt might take months to clean out, especially if the Nazis held on there past fall and into winter when snows come in the mountain passes and ice forms on the mountain roads.

Ask UMW To Get Men Back To Jobs

Pittsburgh, April 14 (AP)—The Solid Fuels Administration said today it is up to the United Mine Workers of America to return thousands of Pennsylvania's idle soft coal miners to their jobs.

The SFA reported that Interior Secretary Ickes has asked the Department of Justice to take "appropriate action under the Smith-Connally act" on votes by more than 4,000 workers at six mines against work resumption until the War Labor Board approves a new contract.

Altogether, 25 Pennsylvania mines remained closed yesterday and 13,523 still engaged in walkouts that started upon expiration of the old contract two weeks ago today.

However, only the 4,000 took action to show why they were staying on strike.

Based on unfounded rumor that the WLB had acted on unfavorably on the new contract which provides a basic $1.07-a-day pay increase, three new walkouts were reported by the SFA.

BELIEVE TROUT ARE PLENTIFUL

Harrisburg, April 14 (AP)—Pennsylvania's 375,000 anglers were assured that streams are in fairly good shape all over the state on the eve of the Trout season, opening at 5 a. m. tomorrow.

Plenty of legal-sized trout were in the commonwealth's lakes, brooks, and rivers, awaiting an anticipated heavy opening day throng for the first Sunday opener since fishing became legalized on the Sabbath.

The Fish commission announced the annual trout stocking program was about 98 per cent complete, indicating an addition of 1,500,000 new legal sized trout since the close of the 1944 season.

Chairman Charles A. French said restocking of trout streams had taken place all over the state. The new species include Brook, Brown, and Rainbow varieties and range from seven to 16 inches in length.

The season extends through July 31 with each angler permitted to catch 10 trout, six or more inches in length, each day at regular trout streams.

Harrisburg, April 14 (AP)—Governor Edward Martin has called for a one-month period of mourning "in tribute to the greatness of Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

Capping a series of tributes paid the late President of the United States, the Governor issued a proclamation yesterday proclaiming "a period of mourning in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania from Friday, April 13, 1945, to Sunday, May 13, 1945."

Flags on all public and private buildings are to be displayed at half-mast during the mourning period, Martin said. All state liquor stores and government offices excluding protective services, are to be closed today.

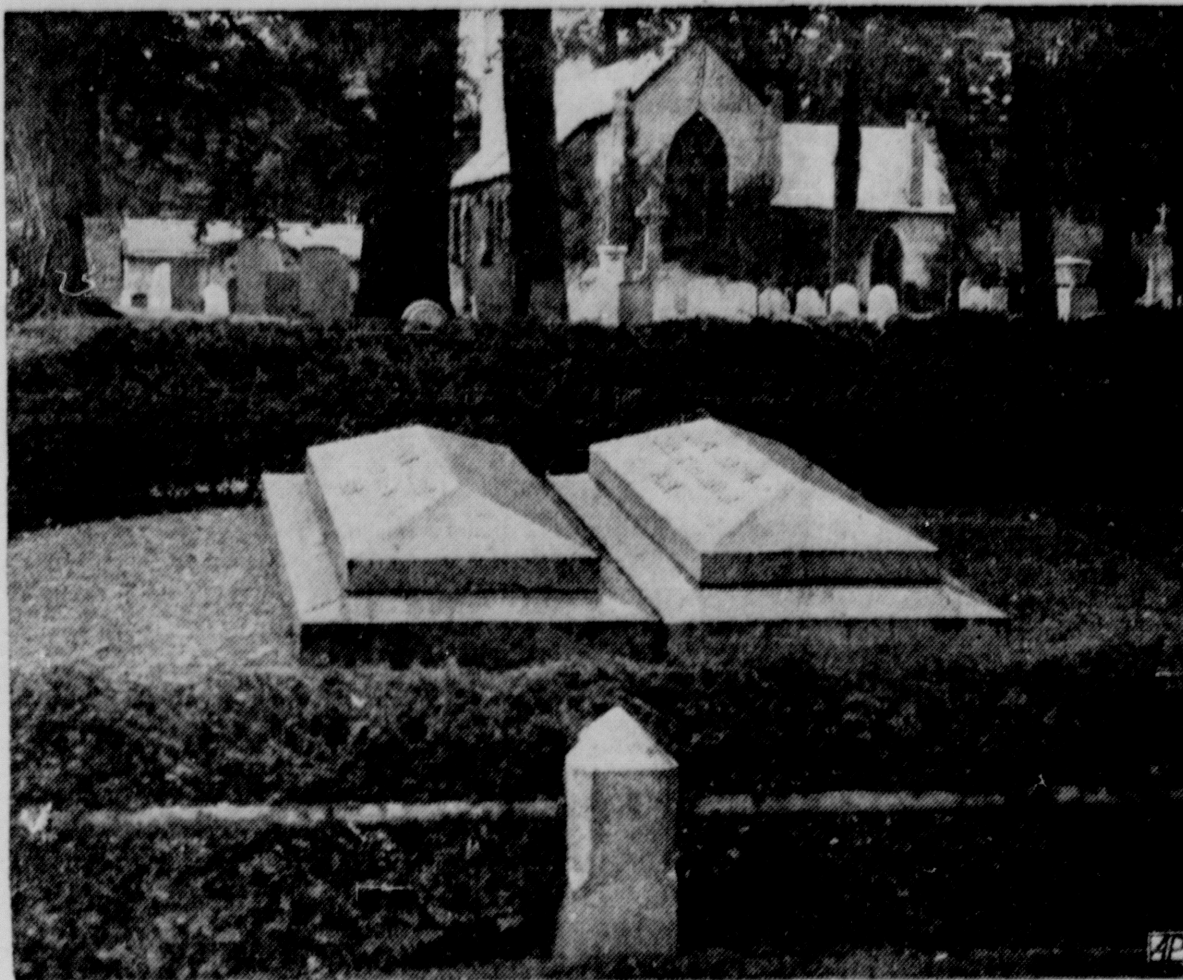

"His name," Governor Martin's proclamation says, "is inscribed forever among the illustrious heroes of America as one who gave his life in the service of his country fighting to preserve and safeguard the ideals and principles which we hold sacred."

Solving Pollination Problems

Certain varieties of stone and pome fruits are self-sterile. This means that trees of any of these varieties need an interchange of pollen from another variety to render their sterile blooms productive. Of course, a sterile tree will bear a normal crop of blooms, and even tiny fruits will usually form. But such trees suffer from what is called failure to "set" its fruit. Other varieties are self-fertile, meaning that they need no cross-pollination, although on large scale plantings it is often wise to "mix in" a few other varieties.

There is much to be learned yet on the subject of adequate pollination of all varieties of apples, pears, peaches, plums and cherries. But from the experience of commercial growers to date a few important facts are firmly established.

Most leading varieties of apples are self-fertile, although successful orchardists usually inter-plant them with other varieties for safety. Among varieties of apples believed to be self-sterile are the Baldwin, Ben Davis, Delicious, McIntosh, Northern Spy, Rhode Island Greening, Stayman Winesap, Golden Delicious and at least a score of others.

Need for Cross-Pollination

Pears in general need pollen from other suitable varieties to render their blooms fertile.

It is a wise precaution to assume that most plums are self-sterile and need cross-pollination.

The same condition prevails among most varieties of cherries.

Little trouble is encountered among peach varieties with poor pollination, although commercial orchardists usually inter-plant other varieties with the Hale, Late Crawford, Greensboro, Red Bird, Rochester and Salway.

One of a few self-sterile trees may be top-worked with scions from fertile varieties to solve the problem permanently, or one or more suitable varieties may be planted nearby. The latter method is, of course, preferred where a fairly large number of trees are to be started.

Owners of a few self-sterile varieties may solve the problem temporarily by obtaining a large bouquet of blooms from a suitable cross-pollinating variety and placing it in a vessel of water beneath or near the sterile trees during the height of the blooming season.

Useful Varieties

Blooms of the Northern Spy, Jonathan and Delicious fertilize the Baldwin, Grimes, Jonathan and McIntosh fertilize the Delicious, Astrachan, Duchess, Grimes, Jonathan and McIntosh serve for the Ben Davis, Delicious, Wealthy and Jonathan pollinate the McIntosh, Grimes, Rome, Transparent and York pollinate the Stayman Winesap.

Black Tartarian or Republican cherries will cross-pollinate most sterile sweet varieties.

Among pears see blooms from Conference and Seckel for the Anjou; Bosc, Flemish and Howell for the Bartlett; for the Keiffer use blooms of Bartlett, Lincoln, Howell

A Prayer

By Daniel A. Poling

GOD OF OUR FATHERS and our God, walk with us in this dark hour that we be not afraid; comfort us that we be not in despair and lift our eyes to the torch that he bore.

We thank Thee for this man who in the generations ahead will be alive as Lincoln is alive, for he raised the standard in the earth to which the humble of all races repaired. We thank Thee for this great one who lived among us and who, as no other man, became man's hope for deliverance from the bondage of fear and for winning a just and enduring peace.

The world shall mourn him as no other yet has been mourned, but our sorrow is not without hope for Thou art still in Thy heaven and the spirit of Franklin Delano Roosevelt whom Thou hast taken unto Thyself, will companion us as we finish the work we are in.

SERVICE
Oh, we shall cash our bonds in time
And take the profit, by and by.
But neither dollar nor the dime
Will leave a scar to catch the eye.
But, those who walk with crutch and cane
Will never be quite whole again!

Oh, we'll forget the rationed gas
And every inconvenience borne,
But, in parade they'll sometimes pass,
Dressed in the uniform they've worn,
And 'til this earth the last one leaves,
There'll always be those empty sleeves!

Our service was a trivial thing.
The cost of it we lightly bore.
And we shall laugh and dance and sing,
But, near us blind men there will be
Who gave their eyes for liberty!

Today's Talk

THE SELF-LIVED LIFE
People who mind the events and happenings of the world, as well as the simplest happenings that touch them nearest, making them entirely personal, miss out on the significance of life. We are not only links in a great chain, but individual items that make up the activity and the good or evil of the world.

No one can live to himself alone and be either happy or successful. The late Wendell Willkie did a tremendous service for humanity by impressing upon all that this world in which we live is in reality one world, with each one of us a responsible factor.

Anyone can learn the simple secret of happiness by taking it upon himself to give out more than he expects to receive. The chances are that he will receive more than he gives out! That is the way it usually works out. Keep giving and you will keep getting.

Selfishness has caused all our tragic and destructive wars. It has broken up our families, and brought untold misery upon the world. Nature is absolutely unselfish in its working. Plant one seed and it returns a thousand, or more.

The United States has given to the other nations of the world a great lesson in its treatment of the Philippines. At first opposing the Americans, the Filipinos soon learned the unselfish purpose behind the American methods of education, tolerance and helpfulness, so that when they were invaded by a tyrant nation, they fought for the freedom that had been so generously given to them, and they will cling to that inheritance forever, and God will bless them in it.

The self-lived life is the isolated, confused, and unhealthy life. It is amazing how widespread becomes the unselfishness of a single life! There will be eternal peace in this most imperfect world of ours if there can only be planted in every human heart the determination to think of the other fellow as important as one's own self. There must be a universal spiritual awakening if we are to end all wars forever. You can't edge out God and expect unity among all nations, or even among single groups of people.

member S.A.E.

Milton must have been thinking of the car owner in a busy service station when he penned the famous line, "They also serve who only stand and wait."

Motorists who stored their cars for the winter will most certainly have a sweet time with sticky valves this spring. There are two ways to combat this, other than buying a manual valve grinding and cleaning up job. Naturally it is worth while trying these simpler plans first. One is to take off the air cleaner and feed a pint of valve oil directly into the carburetor intake while the engine is run fast out in the open. The other is to put a pint or two of the valve oil or gum solvent into the crankcase and give the car a good run over the road, preferably up hills. Then drain the crankcase and add a fresh pint of solvent with the new oil. In cases of severe stickage try both plans.

Out Of The Past
Don't be surprised if the future holds new promise for the electric vehicle. It all hinges on further developments along lines of substitutions for the heavy lead of today's battery. Made of something light batteries could be utilized very efficiently in cars so as to provide several hundred miles of continuous service before the car would wait a half hour for a quick recharge. All this is suggested by two very interesting developments. One is the scathing condemnation of modern car design and construction by Dr. George R. Harrison, Dean of Science, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The other is current wide sale of books on old cars prepared by Floyd Clymer of Los Angeles. Many are beginning to realize that the motor industry threw overboard a lot of good ideas and what's wrong with bringing them back for a return engagement, in a new setting?

If you have respect for the engine of your faithful bus a good rule to remember is to refuse to drive at road speed until the motor's temperature has reached 140 degrees. Until piston rings are normally expanded there will be a marked increase in gases blowing into the crankcase, and if you add the higher combustion pressures of higher speed you simply aggravate this situation.

After you have turned a corner always keep your hands on the wheel and don't make it a habit to let the rim twirl around to the normal straight-ahead position of its own accord. You should put a little hand pressure on the rim to "brake" it, otherwise the wheel may straighten out so speedily that it twirls in the opposite direction and results in a marked jarring of the car with a possible change in its course.

Mechanic Joe Speaking
"These days most of the complaining about carburetors is that they feed too rich a mixture, but actually a lot of trouble could be avoided if owners would ask me to check for excessively lean mixtures. Much starting trouble is nothing more nor less than too much air getting into the intake, around the manifold gaskets or where the manifold bolts to the carburetor. A low float level also causes a lean mixture by making the engine starve for gas. Dirt in the jets has a similar effect, not to mention low output from the fuel pump."

Just because everyone is complaining about low octane gasoline, and the resulting ping, there's going to be a lot of overlooking the simple little things that always have produced excessive knocking. Good example of this is an inoperative automatic spark advance or trouble with the spark advance mechanism. Little known to the average motorist is the effect of improperly spaced breaker points on timing, and thus on the tendency of the engine toward knocking. And in far too many cases the knocking is due largely to a heavy deposit of carbon.

Would Be Filtering Plus

The most unfortunate thing about the oil filter situation is the human equation. Because so many people have the idea that a filter relieves them of the necessity for careful attention to oil changes the myth has developed that cars without filters actually give better results. Naturally enough when there is no filter the owner feels a little more inclined to favor the engine with more frequent drainings of the crankcase, but this in no way lesssens the proven advantages of oil filtration. The ideal, if we could throw overboard the human comedy, would be to replace the filter cartridge as needed and then change just as we always did.

A reversal of the habit of slipping the clutch is partially engaging it in an impatient desire to get going when shifting gears. The result is that the clutch is partially engaged and the gears will naturally clash. Watch this the next time you are in a hurry and the gears do not seem to want to mesh quietly. Lift your foot from the clutch pedal before the shift is completed. Just as a reminder don't forget that if your car has developed the habit of refusing to take a low gear mesh quietly you can achieve your purpose by first shifting into second, then back to low.

Test It Down Hill
Most people use uphill driving as a test of motor power whereas a downhill test may be more convincing. Since the uphill run may be complicated by a tendency for the engine to overheat or for failure of the gas to match the motor's ignition timing, it is better to see what happens when going down a moderate grade in high gear on compression. If the rings are tight and the valves hold compression well the car should lose speed. A slowdown from 40 to 25 would be considered excellent.

Motor life would be a lot simpler if we'd just clear the cobwebs out of our thinking apparatus now and again. I was reminded of this when watching an owner fussing with the cover of the float chamber of the carburetor on his job. He was determined to stop a bad gas leak.

gasoline supply were completely cut off.—E. R. W.

A. This aviation description of the symptoms is well chosen. My diagnosis suggests there is a bad air leak in the intake manifold, causing an over-lean mixture until the engine is well warmed up. Probably a crack in the underside of the manifold.

Q. In testing a motor with a vacuum gauge, and while running the motor in a speed range of 15 to 20 miles per hour, is the hand of the gauge supposed to be steady?—F. Z.

A. There's quite an art to reading a gauge correctly! In general it is true that a wide fluctuation indicates poor valving. In making a test be sure that all connections are tight.

Q. I have a 1941 car that is breaking valve springs. What would cause this?—R. M.

A. This may be the result of a spell of serious overheating. If not, then the chances are that there is water in the oil. This circulates to the valve compartment, rusting the springs.

A SLIGHT CASE OF Theft

Chapter 8
In a few minutes the grisly task was finished, and the lieutenant had gone off to notify the coroner's office. Standing by the canvas-shrouded figure lying just outside of the metal doors leading to the freight elevator, Christopher was thinking of all that had happened in the short time he had been in the store that evening. He was wondering for the first time in his life if he could have been mistaken about finding a place for himself in this store which had been the background of his family for more than sixty-five years.

Dan's death shocked and angered him. He knew Dan so well. When he was a small boy, his father would bring him home to take care of Christopher on days when the servants were away. In the summer time, Dan lived at their country place at Lake Geneva. It was Dan who taught him to swim and had steered him on the first pony he had ever ridden.

Good, faithful Dan. His father used to call him Old Reliable. Fifty years of loyal service to father and son had been Dan's proud boast and now this. The thing was unthinkable. It was inconceivable that Dan had had anything to do with the theft of that fur shipment. It was far more likely he had died defending the store—trying to protect it against robbery. Perhaps he had known the man or men who were stealing the furs—had caught them in the act and paid with his life for this knowledge.

Christopher remembered his flip-pant joke to Brenda Blair earlier in the evening. "We'll bury 'em in furs!" That had been almost too prophetic. Because he had a feeling that amounted now to almost conviction, that those furs had been the direct cause of Dan's death.

Looking down at the motionless figure at his feet, Christopher suddenly realized the long continuity of the years that tied him to this store. In a strange way, poor old Dan symbolized for him a family tradition extending back over three generations of Humberts. No, he couldn't let Dan's death go just as suicide—a routine entry on the police records. There would have to be a thorough investigation that would clear his name and vindicate his character. That was the least he could do for him.

His father used to tell him there was no use in a man having a mind if he couldn't change it. Christopher's keen brown eyes narrowed with the impact of a swift, sure decision. He would take that job in the morning. Then he would see that nothing was taken for granted in connection with Dan's death and that the police made a thorough investigation. There were certain bad spots in the store that needed clearing up. He would do what he could about them and see this fur sale through.

His voice had a decisive ring of authority in it when he spoke to the lieutenant on his return some time later.

"While you were away, Lieutenant, I attended to a few things myself." He announced quietly. "I had a wooden box brought up from the opening and marking room in the basement and I put the rope in it."

The lieutenant looked down at the box at their feet. He noticed the top of it was scarcely fastened down.

"Is the rope in that box?" he asked in a surprised voice.

Christopher nodded. "Yes. It's tied down and held in place with string so there won't be any friction on any part of it."

"Why all this fuss? This kind of a suicide doesn't call for any special investigation. It's perfectly obvious the man killed himself. No question about that. You see, Mr. Humbert, I'm taking over now—I've just been assigned to the case. When I telephoned headquarters, they put me on this job instead of Wallace. This here suicide puts a new angle on it."

"It certainly does," Christopher said slowly. "And it just may turn out that this rope will be quite an important piece of evidence. Anyway, I've fastened it in the box so that nothing can rub against it. The part of the rope that was tied on the beam is marked with tags fastened to the rope with string."

"Jeepers, creepers! Wouldn't that blow your hat in the lake! Say, begging your pardon, Mr. Humbert, but haven't you been reading too many detective stories lately?"

Christopher shook his head and his eyes were serious as he answered the detective.

"No, Donohue. I just have a very definite picture of this man's death. You say he's a suicide. I think he was murdered."

"Murdered? Why Mr. Humbert, murderers don't hang people. There are only a few cases in all our records."

"I know, Donohue," Christopher cut in quickly. "That isn't what I mean. I'm talking about hanging a dead man to make it look like suicide."

Guests Introduced

Then turning to the guests, Major Banzoff declared the community has a responsibility to give wholehearted support to the local unit. Employers can help by making it possible for employees to attend drill and camp periods.

He introduced these officers who accompanied him here: Maj. Edward A. Towne, executive officer for the First Cavalry Squadron; Capt. Ehrman B. Mitchell, adjutant; Lt. Joseph Garner, supply officer and commanding officer of the headquarters detachment; and Lt. Wilson Jordan, commanding officer of the Second Platoon, Troop B, at Hanover.

Other guests presented by Captain Brame were Pvt. John P. Reinecker, wounded veteran of overseas service; Sgt. James Rang, also an overseas veteran who was a former sergeant in the Minutemen, and Sgt. Raymond Strohm, who has aided in the instruction of the Minutemen.

Early in the evening's program the Minutemen stood at parade rest in a moment of silent tribute to "our commander in chief."

UNCLE SAM TO
HAND OUT 44,200,050
EXTRA RED POINTS

The greatest windfall of extra red points ever is going this month, and each month following, to American housewives throughout the country.

44 million extra red points, approximately, will be handed out by meat dealers to customers who turn in used fats in a great Victory drive for this essential of medicines, gunpowder, synthetic rubber, soaps, paints and a hundred other necessities on the battlefield and home front. For each pound of fat turned in, every housewife is entitled to 2 red points.

The need for used fats is still urgent. Women are urged to save every drop, every spoonful of grease possible and keep saving until final Victory over both Germany and Japan.

RADIO PROGRAMS
New York, April 14 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose distinctive voice and dramatic delivery made him outstanding on the air, held a radio record attained by no other president.
He did 302 all-network broadcasts in his 12 years in office, according to figures compiled by CBS and NBC.
Of these, 22 were fireside chats, a series of reports to the people he inaugurated March 12, 1934. His other broadcasts included various formal addresses and talks in political campaigns, in which he used the radio extensively.
The President's last broadcast was the night of March 20, when he made a five-minute Red Cross appeal. Previously, on March 1, he was heard in a report to congress on the Yalta conference, his final formal address. He had been scheduled for another five-minute talk to Jefferson Day diners last night.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY
Reaching new heights of frightening mystery and strange emotion, 20th Century-Fox's new thrill-hit, "Hangover Square," starring Laird Cregar, Linda Darnell and George Sanders, opens Monday at the Majestic theatre.
Originally written as a novel by Patrick Hamilton, author of "Angel Street" and "Rope's End," "Hangover Square" is credited with containing more shudders than either of his other books.
The film horror classic tells the story of a brilliant composer who suffers from lapse of memory, during which he commits brutal, cold-blooded murders, and of a lovely music hall girl for whom he throws away a brilliant career as a serious composer so that he can write her songs, only to be betrayed by her for bigger game.
WEDNESDAY
Living up to a superlative reputation isn't easy, but Ray Milland's stock goes up a notch higher, if that's possible, in the eyes of preview audiences who report his performance in "Ministry of Fear" is unsurpassed.
Milland appears with Marjorie Reynolds in this Paramount psychological drama arriving Wednesday at the Majestic theatre. Other excellent artists in the cast include Carl Esmond, Hillary Brooke, Percy Waram and Edskine Sanford. The theme of "Ministry of Fear" rests on suspense, mystery and intrigue but strikes a romantic note, too.
THURSDAY
A modernized production of "The Sign of the Cross" will be the attraction at the Majestic theatre Thursday. The film shows the burning of Rome by Nero and depicts the persecution of Christians in that era. The all-star cast includes Frederic March, Elissa Landi, Claudette Colbert, Charles Laughton, Ian Keith and Vivian Tobin.
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Ginger Rogers who co-stars with Joseph Cotten in "I'll Be Seeing You."

The Dore Schary production, "I'll Be Seeing You," which is coming to the Majestic theatre next Friday, is a tenderly dramatic story of two bewildered souls who find the way to social and emotional rehabilitation through their great love for each other. It stars Ginger Rogers in a role that is reported to be a histrionic highlight in the versatile young actress' career. Playing opposite her is Joseph Cotten, the actor who received the plaudits of both press and fans for his fine work in "Since You Went Away." Shirley Temple, Spring Byington and Tom Tully head the supporting cast.

Most Sports Events Are Cancelled Today
New York, April 14 (AP)—With few exceptions, the sports world took time out today to join the nation in mourning for the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.
All major league baseball exhibition games were cancelled, as were the Pacific Coast league's contests scheduled for tonight.
Yale, Columbia, New York and Notre Dame universities called off their baseball games.
Tia Juana race track at Agua Caliente, Mexico, cancelled its program and will resume Sunday. Havana's Oriental park first suspended its card, but last night altered that decision without comment, scheduling today's seven races as usual. There was no report regarding Sunday's program. The Hipodromo de las Americas, in Mexico City, was to carry on today's racing card.
Detroit—Phil Terranova, 128½, New York, outpointed Maxie Shapiro, 133, New York, 10. Joe Sutka, 162, Wyandotte, outpointed Sam Hughes, 165, Detroit, 8.

ENLARGEMENT OF YANKEE STADIUM IS NOW PLANNED
By JOE REICHLER
New York, April 14 (AP)—Yankee stadium, already the largest individually owned baseball park with a seating capacity of 72,000, will be expanded to a postwar capacity of 100,000.
Larry MacPhail, president of the Yankees, revealed yesterday that engineers were already working on blueprints to install an extra tier of bleachers, increasing the present capacity 40 per cent.
The former army colonel is also planning to lower the field by excavation to make room for at least 2,000 additional box seats and to reduce the distance between home plate and the screen from 82 to 60 feet thus adding more seats.
Only three fields in the country have a seating capacity of more than 100,000. They are the Los Angeles coliseum, Soldier Field in Chicago and Philadelphia's municipal stadium.
Cleveland's municipal stadium, a civic enterprise, seats more people than the Yankee stadium, but the latter holds the record for attendance when a standing room crowd of 84,041 witnessed a Yankee-Red Sox doubleheader on May 30, 1938.
Giants Trade Players
The New York Giants concluded two player transactions yesterday, trading shortstop Roy Nichols to Jersey City for the 30-year old veteran second baseman Johnny Hudson, and sending outfielder Charlie Dead on option to the Little Giants.
The Senators-Yankees opener Monday will be dedicated to the memory of F. D. R. The crowd will stand a full minute in silent tribute to the late President.
Other major league notes:
Philadelphia Phillies—Buster Adams, who hit 283 last year, broke a long holdout siege after telephone conversation with Manager Fred Fitzsimmons. Pitcher Whit Wyatt, purchased from Dodgers, expected to report before opening game.
Philadelphia Athletics—Broke training camp today after cancelling exhibition games with Bainbridge yesterday and Phillies today.
Cleveland Indians—Manager Lou Boudreau announced opening day lineup: Mickey Rocco, Ed Cihocki, Boudreau, Roy Cullenbine, Pat Seery, Myril Hoag, Ed Carnett, Jim McDonnell and Al Reynolds. Cullenbine to play third.
Walters In Form
Washington Senators—Dropped a 6-4 decision to Buffalo as Pitchers Marino Pieretti and Armando Roche were stung for seven hits.
Cincinnati Reds—Defeated Louisville 8-6 with star right-hander Bucky Walters limiting the Colonels to four hits in five runless innings. Ed Heusser walloped for all six runs in eighth frame.
St. Louis Browns and Cardinals—Meet tomorrow in sixth clash with Browns seeking fifth victory. Jack
